One would think that during its proverbiat nine lives the ordinary cat would have many hairbrea th escapes, but it falls to the lot of the "jaws" of death as a cat had up in the Highlands the other day.

Puss belonged to a gamekeeper in Rossahire and one fine morning its master was a dismayed to see an eagle swoop down upon it, seize it and carry if to its syrie far up on the cliffs. Lately he had seen lambs andfrabbits taken the same way and naturally he feared that his pet was gone forever to become food forthe eaglets.

But lo! Late that very afternoon the cottage door was gently pushed open and in walked the cat. The eagle, being unacquainted with natural history, had treated him as he had the lambs and the rabbits, by carrying him off by the nape of the neck. He had dropped him in among his broad.
